Abortion

Under the 1983 regulations, a woman who visited a federally funded clinic and asked about abortion would have to be told that the clinic staff "does not consider abortion an appropriate method of family planning."
Court challenges had kept the regulations and the abortion-counseling ban from being enforced virtually everywhere. Now, the regulations can be enforced.
In other cases ruled on today, the high court is a 7-2 vote that police who have an owner's permission to search a car generally do not need separate permission of a court when a divorce judgment may not use forced handwriting for to establish a lien the other spouse has on the property.
A 5-4 decision in a Wisconsin case that a spouse awarded ownership of the family home in a divorce judgment may not use forced handwriting for to establish a lien the other spouse has on the property.

Today's decision is no way ahead of the court's 1989 pro-life decision.
In more recent decisions, four justices have criticized that ruling and the court in 1989 gave more greater leeway to make abortions more difficult to obtain.
In a series of decisions, the court had made it clear that federal, state and local governments are under no legal obligation to help pay for abortions sought by women receiving public assistance or other poor women.
Douglas Johnson, legislative director of the National Right to Life Committee, called the decision "a landmark ruling."
"The Supreme Court has rejected the bizarre concept that the Constitution or medical ethics require that abortion be treated the same as contraception," Johnson said.
He said the anti-abortion group was "delighted that President Bush's first appointee, Justice Souter, voted with the majority."
During a public argument session last October in the case decided today, Souter voiced doubts about the 1988 regulations' impact on women and family planning, discussing alternatives with doctors whose prognoses might endanger their health.
"You are telling us the physician cannot perform his usual professional responsibility," Souter told Justice Antonin Scalia, D-Conn., and through an spokesman that he also would quickly to introduce a bill to force the president to veto, and if we can't override the president's veto, we'll make a back of an issue out of it is the most decision," he said.
Karl Michaelson, head of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said Souter's vote was a particular disappointment.
"This ruling is an enormous shock, far worse even than we feared, and undeniable evidence that the chill wind blowing from this court threatens our most fundamental, inalienable rights and liberties," Michaelson said.

Budget

The House Appropriations Committee approved Wednesday one more measure, providing $454 million for the reauthorizing super committee to get experimental anti-smoking to be built in central Texas. The amount was $100 million less than Bush's request.
The outdoor money was contained in a $21.5 billion energy and water bill that the committee approved on a voice vote.
In other action:
—THE HOUSE approved 268-161 a bill authorizing $591 billion in military programs next year. It included deep cuts in Bush's request for strategic weapons, but overall, reflected the total authorized by the administration and Congress last year as part of a deficit reduction agreement, among other things, the measure earmarked $1.5 billion for the Strategic Defense Initiative, known as Star Wars, and shorter missile defenses. Bush had sought $1.4 billion.
It would eliminate $1.2 billion the administration sought for four new B-2 bombers and limit the B-2 South bomber program to the 15 planes in production.
The bill would permit but not require the Air Force and Navy to agree to assign women to fly Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps aircraft in combat. It also would allow military women and dependents overseas to get abortions, at their own expense, at military hospitals.
—CONGRESS approved $556 million to cover the costs of aiding Kurdish refugees and others fleeing conflict in Iraq and to provide other refugee and disaster aid around the world. The Senate approved the bill by a voice vote and sent it to Bush for his signature after the House passed it 373-33.
—THE SENATE Public Works Committee approved, 13-1, a five-year, $107 billion authorization bill for transportation programs. The House passed the measure and sent it to Bush for his signature after the House passed it 373-33.
